Making Inclusive Education Happen: Collaboration and Implementation

An inclusive school is one that supports the needs of all learners (children with and without disabilities) and systematically works to ensure that all children participate, belong, and feel like a member. For over 50 years, research on building inclusive education has been driving practice to achieve the vision of a world where children of all abilities learn, play, and grow together. Translating this vision into reality requires that we create environments in which children of all abilities can participate successfully in valued routines, rituals, and activities. Through this participation we help children become members of the community, develop meaningful relationships, and develop the skills that they need to be successful in school, home, and in the community. The workshop aims to outline the beliefs that support inclusive education and provide concrete suggestions to educators, students and support professionals about strategies that they can implement to make inclusion a reality. During the workshop, participants will engage in facilitated learning of strategies that promote inclusion through case studies, group discussions etc. culminating in action planning for implementation of the strategies in their settings.

Learning outcomes:

Participants will learn:

1. underpinning values and belief systems that support inclusion
2. environmental and activity adaptations to support inclusion in the classroom
3. classroom strategies for inclusive practice

Target Participants

Educators and support professionals from preschool, mainstream school and early intervention settings
Therapists, psychologists and other allied health professionals who support children with disabilities in inclusive settings.

About the Trainer:

Dr. Ilene Schwartz is a professor and chair in the Area of Special Education at the University of Washington and the Director of the Haring Center for Research and Training in Education at UW. She earned her Ph.D. in child and developmental psychology from the University of Kansas and is a board certified behavior analyst (BCBA-D).
